We Are Not at War and May Not Be

It is not a time to assume, as some impulsively do assume, that the United States is now practically at war, with the Lend-Lease Act and the seizure of European shipping in American ports.

We are not at war, and we may not be, though there is no longer any question that to support our principles we are taking a desperate risk of war. Probably, the President himself would not disagree with the statement of objectives made by the very isolationist President Hutchins of Chicago University: "The country wants to defend itself, aid Britain, and stay out of war." There is still a chance of doing all three.

We are not neutral in the sense the word is understood toward the end of the last and the beginning of this century. At that time, an idea of neutrality began to be built up which meant a rigid impartiality to both sides in a war amounting to indifference. The World War taught us the extreme difficulty of maintaining any such position.

But Attorney General Robert H. Jackson set before the Inter-American Bar Association at Havana the manner in which the concept of neutrality has changed. Grotius, the founder of international law, was cited by Jackson as writing in 1625: "... it is the duty of neutrals to do nothing which may strengthen the side which has the worse cause, or which may impede the motions of him who is carrying on a just war..."

Thus the original concept of neutrality was not one of indifference or even of rigid impartiality. This legalistic idea grew up in the late 19th century, the idea that once a war was started, the world was somehow bound to pass no judgment on which side was right, but to treat both precisely the same.

The years from 1930 to 1940 were a fine demonstration of the folly of such a view of neutrality. Had the League been able to put effective pressure on Italy, or on Japan, much that has happened might not have happened. Had a united world insisted on saying "No!" to Germany when it marched back into the demilitarized Rhineland, the whole tragedy enveloping the world today might have been avoided.

At any rate, the world has found that it cannot afford to be indifferent when the world's peace is broken by any nation. We all feel the effects of that violation—in fact, Jackson scarcely exaggerated when he said that any aggressive war today is "a civil war against the international community."

Today, any major war affects every country in the world. It is idle and unrealistic for neutrals to pretend that a potential aggressor is restrained by the thought that he will find the whole neutral world against him, either actively or passively, there will be small chance that aggressive wars will cease.

We do not approve military aggression. While neutral, we propose to help victims of aggression, and help them effectively. It is not war as we see it. It may, admittedly, lead to war. That is the risk we take, but unless some are willing to take it, there is no road to a world free of the constant overhanging fear of aggression.

Wanna Be Big Movie Director? Keep Working at Ham Acting

Lucie Neville is pinch-hitting for Paul Harrison, now touring army camps and defense industries.

By LUCIE NEVILLE
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD—Some of the most inspired acting and heaviest emoting isn't done by the stars and never is seen on a movie screen. It's all on the sidelines, in scenes acted out by the men who tell the stars how to play scenes.

They aren't as handsome or as romantically appealing as the matinee idols they boss; in fact, the majority of Hollywood's directors are middle-aged, thin of hair and thick of waistline, but they're incurable actors.

William Wellman complained loudly when he had to send Joel McCrea home from the set of "Pioneer Woman" to nurse a sore throat, and to rearrange the schedule to shoot only scenes in which Barbara Stanwyck appeared. Actually, Wellman was delighted at the opportunity to read the actor's cue lines to Miss Stanwyck in a Romeo and Juliet balcony scene.

Once a Ham, Always a Ham
There was much impassioned whispering of "Come down! . . . then I'll come up! I love you . . ." as Wellman gave as corny a performance as any new stock player, but there wasn't any question of the dialog director or script clerk substituting for McCrea—not while Wellman was around. "Dirence Henry King is called the 'one-man cast' during 'Chad Hanna' he read Dorothy Lamour's love lines, cueing Henry Fondas in as seductive and sultry a tone as the actress."

All these actor-directors sheepishly excuse themselves with the crack that a ham's never cured, but there is more reason than that. Director Jack Conway does it to set the tempo of the scene and work out the timing of the action. After he has acted all the roles, before rehearsal, his cast know just what he wants, then give their own interpretations.

Busby Berkeley, who once was a hooper in road shows, then became a movie dance director and now is directing such big-time musicals as "Strike Up the Band," doesn't just stand off and tell his stars and chorines to kick higher. He gets in and kicks with them. Berkeley knows it's important to learn each routine in his pictures so that he can regulate the timing of camera, dancers and music.

He Draws 'Em Pictures
Odder directorial technique is that of Norman McLeod, who makes a pencil and scratch pad do his acting. Originally a cartoonist, later an actor, he not only knows what action and facial expressions he wants, he's able to show them, with simple sketches. It's a great success for comedy, because McLeod's cartoon characters are as funny as they're instructive.

One of the maddest to watch is George Cukor, who goes through every emotion of his entire cast, in pantomime, while a scene is in progress. He shakes his head, laughs uproariously, chatters, shouts with rage—all without making a sound. Funniest act Cukor put on, unconsciously, was during the beauty parlor sequence in "The Women," in which he gave invisible mud-packs and manicures, arranged hair that was thin air.

While portly Norman Tausog carefully acted out each scene with adult players in "Mom of Boys Town," he went to the opposite extreme with juveniles. After explaining the plot situation to a youngster, he would read the lines in an expressionless voice, then ask "How would you say it?" Nine times out of 10, Tausog whether or not you should give her a wedding gift—

(a) Send her a gift since you are a close friend, even though it is not necessary to send wedding gifts to a bride who has been married before?

(b) Feel that it would be wrong for you to send a gift, even though the bride is a close friend?

Answers:

1. Not ordinarily. If she is very young, she might wear white dress and picture hat. Under no circumstances should she wear a wedding veil.
2. She might wear a pastel street-length dress with a flower-decked hat or a long colored chif-fon or organdy, with some sort of sleeves.

3. Yes.

4. Her friends may plan parties for her, but they should not be showers, and there should not be a lot of white satin ribbon on the table or figures of a bride and groom. That is, it should not be the kind of party that was given for her at the time of her first marriage.

5. The same kind that would be served at any evening reception. Punch and small frosted cakes would be all right.

Christian Forces Today Face Same Battles as Disciples of Old
Text: Acts 1:1-12

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

From the Gospels we turn now to six months study in the Acts and the Epistles, continuing the story of the founding of the Christian church.

It is Luke, the beloved physician, whose story of the earthly life of Jesus is the fullest and most picturesque to whom we are indebted for the further story of the events following the Resurrection. The source of this story is very properly called "the Book of the Acts," for it is essentially a story of action.

In the Epistles we find the discussion of matters of doctrine and the problems that arose in the early church, but here we have the record of events, the story of how the Christian church took root in various

Baer, Nova to Meet Friday

California Heavies to Meet Second Time

NEW YORK —(AP)— It is a very tough problem to pick the winner of Friday night's 12-rounder in Madison Square Garden between Maxie Baer and Lou Nova, the California collegian.

Promoter Mike Jacobs is expecting some 17,000 fans to contribute to a fund of over $20,000, for this fuss which is to decide a September opponent for Joe Louis, provided the Negro doesn't suffer a relapse from overwork against Tony Musto, Abe Simon, Billy Conn and probably one or two others.

Two years ago Nova stopped Max Baer with a cut mouth in 11 rounds after Baer had the blonde boxer so groggy in the sixth he was walking to the wrong corner. With Lou's stubborn pride in his ability to slug it out with any fighter, it wouldn't be surprising if he tries to do just that and winds up sound asleep after catch-ious communities, and grew in fellowship and power despite persecution.

Jesus had charged his disciples to remain at Jerusalem, following His Resurrection and Ascension, until they should receive the baptism of the Holy Spirit. His promise was that they should become witnesses for Him both in Jerusalem and to the uttermost parts of the earth. Most assuredly, men and women who were engaged in that enterprise needed to have faith and power.

One can hardly conceive of a more stupendous venture than for a little band of disciples, whose Master had been crucified and who were still subject to great persecution, to set before themselves the goal of conquering the whole world with their faith and with the ideals of the Christian religion.

Yet, history has vindicated the faith of these disciples, and it has fulfilled the promise that Jesus gave of power to all who

Stanwyck, Fonda Star in 'Lady Eve' - Saenger Sunday, Monday

Comedy Hit of Year Comes to Local Theater

Director Preston Sturges Has Long List of Remarkable Hits

If ever a picture showed promise of being the comedy hit of the year it is Paramount's new excursion into the laugh field, "The Lady Eve," written and directed by Preston Sturges and starring Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda in the chief comedy roles. Featured in the brilliant cast of the picture, which arrives Sunday at the Saenger Theater, are such always-welcome players as Charles Coburn, Eugene Pallette, William Demarest, Eric Blore, Martha O'Driscoll and Luis Alberni.

"Even Hollywood, supposed to be accustomed to the unusual, was amazed at the rapid-fire pace that Sturges set when he completed three pictures in approximately a year. The remarkable thing is that they're all hits! First came "The Great McGinty," which Sturges then followed up with last season's solid comedy success, "Christmas in July." Now, he comes out with a picture, "The Lady Eve," which advance reports say is the best thing Sturges has done to date. Hollywood is already hailing Sturges as a genius at handling comedy. "The Sturges touch" is by way of becoming as real and distinguished as the vaunted "Lubitsch touch."

"The Lady Eve" is about a rich young man, an expert on snakes, a naive fellow, not very worldly, who becomes the target for a gang of slick international cardsharps, as he is returning aboard ship from an Amazonian expedition. The beautiful lead-actress, Barbara Stanwyck, who didn't plan to let love take a hand when she marked the rich young man, Henry Fonda, as a card victim. When Fonda learns she's a double-dealer at cards, he's sure she's a double-crosser about being in love with him, and he quits her. But Barbara can't be brushed off that easily.

Posing as a titled Englishwoman, "The Lady Eve," she gains entrance into the circle of wealthy families Fonda hobnobs with, through the aid of a former confederate, Eric Blore, who presents her as his niece. Fonda allows himself to be convinced he has never seen "Lady Eve" before, and sets down her resemblance to the beautiful cardsharp as a miraculous coincidence. Although he's still in love with the clever card-lady, he marries the girl he believes to be her double, "The Lady Eve."

From this set of circumstances, Sturges has woven what advance reports agree is some of the smartest comedy in many screen seasons.

For Fonda, his role in the Sturges picture must have come like lightning into a dark-gray scene, for his last few pictures have been rather on the grim, dramatic side. In this picture, however, Fonda slips the tether and is allowed to run riot in light, farcical comedy. He even is permitted the luxury of wearing evening clothes after being in rough denim and dungarees in films for so long. Miss Stanwyck, too, gets a chance to don some eye-opening clothes. As a matter of fact, Sturges, in one scene, says in his

Italians Hit Hard at Sea

Ionian Sea Fight Compared to Jutland Battle

ALEXANDRIA (AP)—Italian casualties in the battle of the Ionian sea probably were the heaviest of any single naval engagement since the battle of Jutland in the World War, British naval authorities said Friday.

Thus, they asserted, the original British estimate of 3,000 Italians lost in the engagement last week-end may actually be considerably higher.

Lease-Lend Aid for New Ships

212 New Vessels and 50 or 60 Shipways Provided

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Roosevelt announced Friday he had allocated 500 million dollars from the 7 billion dollar lease-lend act for 212 new merchantmen and about 50 or 60 new shipways.

He told his press conference he also had authorized expenditure of another 500 million dollars for existing military equipment to be turned over to nations resisting aggression.

Rescue workers said it would take hours more to remove all those on the plane.

Flying Jobs for Youths

Those Who Fail as Pilots Are Placed Elsewhere

By PAUL HARRISON

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

MARCH FIELD, Riverside, Cal. — The Army Air Corps has begun to draw on a rich store of aeronautical talent which until now has gone unnoticed. It will be good news for many hundreds of eager young men who didn't quite make the grade when they were trying to become the super-pilots required for our flying forces.

They won't become pilots now, either, because standards haven't been lowered. But waiting for them in the new big bombers are new jobs, just as important and exciting.

As navigators, they'll plot the sky routes of long range missions.

As bombardiers, they'll operate that greatest of all the United States' aeronautical secrets—the amazingly accurate bomb sight. They'll also be qualified as observers; and, as a matter of routine, in aerial gunnery and radio.

Already Have Fine Training

Here at March Field, assigned for training with technical units, is a group of those cadets who were "washed out" of the schools at Kelly or Randolph Fields, and sent home.

They had been superior material at the beginning, surviving rigid tests which had turned back most of the applicants. They completed their primary flying and had sailed into basic and advanced courses. And then, somewhere along the line, and for reasons which could be considered valid only in a service demanding perfection, they were washed out.

It was pretty tough to be let out, even though 40 or 50 or even 60 per cent of their classmates also were going back to civilian life. And their country's heavy investment in their training was apparently wasted.

Just as well pleased as the cadets themselves with their reclamation is Brig. Gen. Frank D. Luckland, commander of the First Bombardment Wing, GHQ Air Force. It happens that the general himself formerly was in command of Kelly Field, Texas to which primary cadets were graduated for advanced training. So he knows the qualities of skill, courage and enthusiasm to be found among the young men who had to be so sternly weeded out.

This correspondent had a group interview with eight of the cadets, half of whom had been dismissed during training at Randolph Field, and the others from the advanced course at Kelly.

One said he didn't know why he hadn't qualified. Another said he did not have quite enough co-ordination. A third admitted a trick stomach which, when they began flying the fast stuff, would give him just a second's uneasiness during tight turns and at the bottoms of dives. Instructors found that during those critical instants, his reflexes were a rifle slow. And out he went.

"Eight out of 10 of us felt that we could fly all right," said a fourth young man. "I was mostly our inability to absorb all the highly technical stuff that had to be crammed into us during our training. But we are sure that we've got something to give to these new jobs, and we're mighty glad to be back in uniform and in sight of commissions again."

"Washed Out"—But Not

Washed Up

Cadet Harry Schreiber, whom I saw just before he took off with a squadron of Flying Fortresses, said that he had been washed out of Randolph Field as a "dangerous pilot." It seems that he was overconfident or something, because he just couldn't remember to observe all of the rules and precautions for primary trainees.

That was in December, 1936, which seems to have been an especially unlucky season for cadets, because Schreiber said only 41 in a class of 300 ever got commissions. He went back to his home in Galveston and then took to cotton dusting. In winged crates which weren't even licensed, he'd go skimming over the fields and striding the boll weevils with clouds of poison dust. He and a friend also flew around Texas in an ancient bi-plane which, being unlicensed, could not even be taken into regular airports.

Schreiber found time to finish his interrupted engineering course at Texas A. & M. When the defense emergency loomed, he regarded it wistfully for awhile, then wrote suggesting that maybe he could be given another chance.

The reply was that there had been no relaxing of standards for army pilots. But would he care to go to Pan-American's navigation school, from which he might be sent for training and commission with some bombardier or reconnaissance group?

So Cadet Schreiber, and many more like him who were washed out, are getting a chance to prove that they're not washed out.

Someone has said that race horses feel the cold more than other kinds of steeds . . . maybe so, but when you consider how many people put their shirts on race horses, they should be well protected from the cold.

"I suppose you remember all the little details of your courtship. Do you remember who introduced your husband to you?"

"Oh, we just met. I don't blame anybody."

"Your wife used to be so nervous. Now she's as calm and cool as a cucumber. What cured her?"

"The doctor. He just told her that her kind of nervousness was the natural result of advancing age."

Brest Bombed by the British

Oil Tanks Also Attacked in Raids Along Coast

LONDON (AP)—Strong British air force units Thursday night bombed the French port of Brest where two German battleships are sheltered and also attacked oil tanks at Rotterdam and docks at Ostend, the air ministry reported Friday.

The operation cost the British four planes, a communiqué said.

Poor visibility made it difficult for pilots to ascertain the results of the raid on the Brest naval base "but heavy bombs were seen to fall across the dry docks and several fires were started in the port," the bulletin added.

Italy Raps at U. S., Britain

Says Roosevelt Seeking Cannon Fodder in Balkans

ROME (AP)—Stefani, official Italian news agency, charged Friday that the United States and Britain through "internal intrigue" in the Balkans "openly are seeking cannon fodder without Roosevelt being obliged to have American citizens cross the ocean."

"Torrents of gold have been poured into the Balkans," the news agency said. "The Balkans have been deeply upset by internal intrigue without precedent in history for the brutality with which it is conducted."

Same Policy for Hungary

No Change as Result of Premier's Death

BUDAPEST (AP)—Neither Hungary's foreign nor domestic policies will be changed as a result of the death of Premier Count Pal Teleki, an official declaration published in morning newspapers asserted Friday.

Foreign Minister Dr. Laszlo de Borkossy, appointed to succeed Count Teleki, announced he would retain all members of the Teleki cabinet and would himself keep the foreign portfolio.

Count Teleki, who aligned his country with the Axis but fought continually to keep it from falling completely under Nazi domination, was found dead in bed Thursday morning and authoritative sources said he had put a bullet through his brain.

Italian Ships Are Scuttled

Five Destroyers Sunk, Scuttled in Red Sea Area

LONDON (AP)—The admiralty announced Friday night the scuttling of two Italian destroyers and the sinking of another in the Red Sea, bringing to five the total of Italian destroyers sunk in that area in the last few days.

"The destroyers scuttled were the Pantera and the Tigre," a communiqué said.

"One of these was capsized and her forefoot is just showing above the water. The other is lying on the bottom with her mast and part of her foremast funnel showing above the water. A number of Italian prisoners of war from these destroyers have been landed."

'Everything Happens to Me'

CYNTHIANA, Ky. (AP)—It's been some time since Edgar B. Vanhook, 52, has been involved in an accident, so he's had a chance to recall the score of mishaps which have plagued his life.

He lists them thus:

At the age of five, he fell into a fire and received lifetime scars. When he was eight he fell into a pond on his father's farm and nearly drowned.

At ten, he broke an arm; at 15, he broke a leg. At college he suffered a broken nose.

At 17 he almost lost his life when he jumped into a river in an attempt to save a companion's life. Soon he developed typhoid fever.

Early in 1917 he underwent a surgical operation and two weeks later while examining a mold pit, accidentally shot himself in the abdomen.

Vanhook enlisted in the Marines after recovering from 1917's adventures and, of course, was in a truck when it overturned, killing and injuring several prisoners. He escaped with minor injuries.

He has had pneumonia several times and has been in five automobile accidents—the worst of which occurred six years ago near Georgetown, when one man was killed, another seriously hurt and Vanhook only slightly injured.

His business? He sells insurance.

Man of the house: "I miss the old cuspidor since it's gone."

The Mrs.: "You missed it before. That's why it's gone."
